

Kilfinan Parish Church

Kilfinan Parish Church figures prominently in the history of Clan Lamont. The earliest surviving written record of the clan, and one of the earliest of any clan; is a charter signed in 1235 by Sir Laumon, first Chief of Clan Lamont, and his uncle Duncan, giving the church to the monks of Paisley. Many of the early chiefs, including Sir Laumon's son Malcolm, are buried here. It is still an active parish church

It is located on the western side of Cowal, near the shore of Loch Fyne, almost due west of Dunoon. It is currently (1995) undergoing a restoration project. Most of the funds for this project, have been donated by Lamonts around the world.